A down-on-her-luck musician joins a prestigious arts academy to save her family—only to uncover a deadly world of privilege, pressure, and performance. In a place where you either get famous or die, staying alive might be the hardest act of all.

What if fame wasn't a dream—but a trap? In Golden Cages, cruelty isn't just a byproduct of success—it's the currency. Set in a cutthroat academy where rich kids are bred for stardom and talent is exploited like blood sport, this is a twisted coming-of-age story about the cost of visibility and the price of survival.

Unlike other YA dramas, our lead isn't chasing fame—she's surviving it. She enters the world of glitter and lights not to shine, but to shield her sister from the dark.

The tone swerves between ironic and deadly serious—a twisted Pitch Perfect with the tension of Barry and the aesthetic of Neon Demon.

Ensemble cast with interconnected A/B/C/D plots, but a grounded emotional core centered on one morally driven heroine.
